Game competitions start to heat up on Day Two

By Rob Driscoll

TO THE LIMIT: Whitehorse skier Sara Nielsen is given a much-needed hug after an exhausting race in the Cross Country Skiing Midget Girls Classic Event at Mt. McIntyre on Tuesday. Photo by Vince Federoff

Snowshoe specialists Ross Burnett and Brian Bell continued to make a killing on the gold market as each cashed in their second gold ulu in as many days to highlight a successful day for the host contingent in day two of the Arctic Winter Games.

From the AWG statistical reports at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, the Yukon had counted seven gold ulus to go with seven silver and one bronze. That left the home squad on even terms with Alaska in the gold market (nine gold ulus). The Yukoners (10 silver ulus) are leading the way in the silver trade, but the Americans have padded their wallets with bronze riches. The Alaskans have 10 shares of bronze, while the Yukon checks in with three.

Burnett (open men division) and Bell (junior men) conquered the Mt. McIntyre trails in the 1,500-metre snowshoe race, while fellow Yukoners Chester Kelly (open men), Ann Nason (open women) and Brent Langbakk (junior men) all grabbed silver for the second straight day, also in the 1,500 race.

Alaska's Georgina Gustafson (open women) and the Northwest Territories' Jaida Green (junior women), also doubled up on their gold stocks in the Tuesday races, while Beth Miller, from Alaska, made it two-for-two in silver ulus.

Greenland and Alberta each registered their first shares on the ulu exchange in Tuesday events.

Maliina Bitsch Abelsen staked Greenland's first claim to gold in the Yukon by capturing the junior girls 5-km classic cross-country race. Pipaluk Rosing (silver) and Sandra Rosing (bronze) claimed two more spots on the podium for the Greenlanders.

Blake Jusilla struck Alberta's first gold of the competition by topping the field in the juvenile boys 7.5-km biathlon event. Alberta also reeled in three bronze: Todd Loberg in the juvenile boys biathlon, Kirk Loberg in the 10-km open men's biathlon sprint and Corey Rowe in juvenile boys cross-country skiing.

Alaska captured seven ulus in the cross-country races, including golds from John Soderstrom (midget boys) and Gus Caterinichio (juvenile boys).

The Yukon dug up three gold ulus in Tuesday's skiing: Doris Hausleitner (junior women), Dallas Eng (junior men) and Renee Bertrand (midget girls).

Thane Phillips (open men) and Janet Arntzen (juvenile girls) hauled came up with golden performances in the biathlon sprints, while Sue Strutz strutted golden stuff in the open women's biathlon.

In the first dog mushing results to be reported, the Paul Conn sled sped to the title for Alaska, with Lon Perkinson and Brent Beck, both from the N.W.T., rounding out the top three finishers in the 1/4km event.

Closing out the 6 p.m. report from Tuesday, Manny Buckley brought home top honors for the N.W.T. in the Dene Games feature of the day — the finger pull. Brian Walker, from Alaska, pulled in the silver ulu, while the N.W.T.'s Lloyd Lamouille put his finger on the bronze.

Yukon's biathlon team wins a gold

John Flynn and his snowshoe biathlon team added another gold medal to the Yukon's standing after winning the 4 x 3 km open team event.

Flynn with team members Laurie Jacobson, Debbie Supple and Kevin Anderson beat out the Northwest Territories by six minutes and forty five seconds.

"The NWT gave us a run for the money," said Flynn, who finished the race for team Yukon.

"Real good, it was close," said Flynn describing the race moments just after his flawless finish.

Team member Anderson started the race but fell behind early and in the second leg Jacobson gained a six minute lead on the NWT. Supple ran her leg of the race well but finished just 40 seconds behind the NWT when she handed the race over to Flynn who literally destroyed the field by nearly seven minutes.

"I think we put a scare into them (NWT) and showed them we could come back," said Flynn. "Plus it was St. Patrick's day."

Flynn looked in top form, shot a perfect 10 for 10 and sprinted across the finish line for the Yukon's victory.

"It doesn't matter how good you shoot, anything can happen," Flynn commented on the team's performance.

Flynn, a repeat gold medalist from the past three Arctic Winter Games, says he plans to go for gold in Thursday's three and five kilometer individual snowshoe biathlon competitions.

"I think we'll do well . . ." mused Flynn on Team Yukon's performance in up coming events.

Mission Headquarters is fast pace with little grace

Often times we put on a large scale event such as the 1992 Games, and forget to acknowledge the people in the trenches! Such as the volunteers who manage the mission headquarters.

Nineteen hour work days are irregular for most of us, but seem to be a way of life at the Mission Headquarters. Mornings begin with a wake - up call at 5:45 a.m., to meet the first shift and open the centre for 7 a.m. Although most staff are not expected to put in extraordinary shifts, they often do. Linda Bourassa, the Manager of Mission Headquarters is known to put in fourteen hour days. This is not a job for slow movers, you must think on your feet and forever be accountable for the decisions you make. Bourassa commented that, "I have had to make more decisions in the last three days than in the previous six months".

An observation of the staff would probably result in the following job description: Responsible for the assistance and direction of approximately 65 mission members from each of the six participating contingents for the 1992 Arctic Winter Games. The successful applicant must be extremely personable and a quick thinker. It is mandatory that the eligible candidate be able to solve communications problems such as facsimile technology, computer engineering, high quantity duplication techniques, and possess a good comprehension of the English, French, Inuituk, Southern Tutchone, Russian, Greenlandic and any other languages which I have missed. Candidate must distribute information to all contingents, help with accreditation, write minutes for the chef's meetings, book and look after meeting rooms, act as a central base for the pagers and cellular phone network, set-up lounge for mission and organize box lunches. It must be noted that all volunteers for the mission headquarters will be required to perform extensive work up and beyond this job description. Those with a weak heart need not apply.

A little credit is due to the hard working staff at the Mission Headquarters, They are:

Judy Powell
Lisa Park
Darlene Smith
Cheryl Martin
Jennifer Flynn

Bonnie Swanstrom
Kathy Zrum
Jane McArthur
Jami Eistetter
Linda Bourassa

What's Hot:

Pins, Pins, Pins

By Paul J. Otto

One of the major activities taking place this week is an unofficial one. But unofficial or not, it is by far one of the most popular. This is the sport of pin trading. Athletes, coaches, directors and public alike are all being caught up in this frenzied activity. All through the community it is commonplace to see two total strangers stop each other on the street and start trading pins.

One active pin trader today was Sam McConkey from Fairbanks, Alaska. An Opthamologist (eye surgeon) by 'trade', he is here as a Director for Team Alaska. Pin trading has been a hobby of his for some years now and the Arctic Winter Games has always been one of his favorite stops.

A pin trading area will be set up in the front foyer of the gymnasium at Yukon College. The most popular pins after the first couple of days of trading are:

1. Yukon Ministers' Pin (numbered)
2. CBC Ulu Pin
3. Buyers Transport Padi (sponsor pin)
4. Team Yukon Dogsled
5. CBC Kavic Pin
6. Team Alaska Gold Map 1992
7. Greenland Viking Ship Pin
8. Team Alberta Ministers' Pin
9. Yukon Dene Games Pin
10. NWT Large Polarbear Games Pin 1992
