ALASKA, YUKON SHARE LEAD

THE LONELINESS of the cross country skiler is depicted by Glenna Frost of Yukon on her way towards helping sister's Shirley and Mary capture junior women's 3x5 kilometre cross country relay gold medal Wednesday.

Alaska grabbed a share of the grand aggregate lead with host Yukon Territory Thursday as the second Arctic Winter Games completed Day Four.

After the completion of six of 12 sports, Alaska and Yukon have 19 points each, Defending team champion, Northwest Territories, has 15 1/2 points, Arctic Quebec, competing in its first Games, has 2 1/2 points after picking up two silver medals in wrestling yesterday. wrestling yesterday.

Grand aggregate points are awarded only after the completion

Grand aggregate points are awarded only of a sports event.

In the medal standings, Alaska is far out front. The American team has compiled 40 gold, 36 silver and 23 bronze. Yukon has 19 gold, 19 silver and 19 bronze. NWT has collected 15 gold, 14 silver and 22 bronze. Besides its two silver medals, Arctic Quebec has one gold silver and 22 bronze. Besides its two silver megals, Arche Que bec has one gold.

Yukon's talented Sharman Simpson was a double gold medal winner in figure skating. Miss Simpson won the Class C ladie's singles and then teamed with Gathy Allen to skate away with the Class F ladie's pairs.

The Yukon's Frost sisters made their presence felt in cross country skiing as Shirley, Glenna and Mary captured the junior women's 3x5 kilometre relay in 64.36 seconds, Yukon's Darra Sibley, Ruth Ann Watt and Aranlee Felker also won gold, taking the juvenile women's 3x5 kilometre relay in 72.28 seconds, It was another big day for Alaska in alpine skiing as that area's competitors won all six titles, bringing to 12 the number of gold medals they have won in that sport.

Yesterday, Peter Crews took the junior boy's giant slalom, Toby Todd the open men's giant slalom, Susan Fenn, the junior girl's giant slalom, Susan Wick the open women's giant slalom, Jean Ann Scott the juvenile race and Bruce Fenn the juvenile boy's giant slalom. In the highlight curling match of the day-the open men's division-Allan Delmanc of Noutherst Power and State of the limit in deleating Don Twa of the Yukon, 10-9.

Shooting saw Alaska win both the C.F. Handgun team title and the .22 Handgun crown. Members of both winning teams are Davie Dyck, Keith Munson, Ray Schwann, Bill Schweinle and Thomas Vining.

They scored 4173x104 in the C.F. category and 4163x110 in the .22 handgun division.

In hockey yesterday, the Yukon defeated Alaska 10-2 in an intermediate game. Craig Lonney and Dan Sheardown placed the Yukon attack with two goals each. Lonney also collected three assists.

Other hockey action saw Northwest Territories defeat Alaska 6-1 in midget division and Yukon edge Northwest Territories 5-4 in a bantam game. Wayne Jeskie led the NWT midget win with three goals. Jim Erickson's goal at 17:42 of the third period gave Yukon the win over NWT in the bantam game. The Yukon's open female volleyball team didn't play yesterday, but still made news. National volleyball coach, Vic Lindal, here as the chief referee of the competition, disclosed that the team has a good chance of being invited to participate in the Canadian championships next weekend in Edmonton.

Yukon girls are currently unbeaten in three matches. They met Alaska today in a key game, der complete international rules, It is the first time any volley-ball tournament in Vanada has done so.

With just two days of competition left, the eventual winner of the grand aggregate title and the Arctic Winter Games flag is still anyones guess. Those sports still to be decided are badminton, volleyball, basketball, curling and hockey. All but the hockey events windup tonight.

Stay tuned for further details.

It's official. That previously unclimbed, unnamed mointain scaled on Monday by a five-member Arctic Winter Games expedition, will probably become known as Mount Ulu.

The mountain, 10, 160-feet high and 150 miles from Whitehorse in the Mount Kennedy group, was officirally captured at 4:55 p.m., Monday by expedition leader Monty Alfond of Whitehorse and four representatives from the areas competing in the second Arctic peting in the second Arctic Winter Games. Yesterday afternoon, at a press conference, Alford said the expedition had decided to submit the name Mount Ulu to the Canadian Board of Geographical Names, "Unless there has been 10 Mount Ulus named in the past year, we have a good chance of it being accepted," he said.

It was originally speculated the expedition would name the mountain Ulu, after the AWG medals,
On talking about his expedition team, Alford said:

last night he was resting comfortably but didn't know how long he would be re-quired to stay in hospital. They said a decision will be made with the next few days.

Alford said of the injury:
"Jim didn't tell us anything about his trouble until we about his trouble until we reached the peak. He didn't want to jepordize the expedition. He knew that we would have forfeited the climb if we knew he was hurt. All Learner is the common transfer of the climb if we knew he was hurt. hurt. All I can say is that Jim Boyde is a very cour-ageous and great man."

Mush, said Lorraine, mush

(Ulu reporter, Lorraine Pound, was a contestant in the Arctic Winter Games' dog sled championship race Thursday. Luckily for us, she was in the winning sled.

Here's her story.)

That's what I did Thursday
-and won the Arctic Winter
Games dog sled race, sponsored by Gaines Dog Food.
But I can't really take credit--that all goes to Paul mucher for the race and the owner of the winning team.

When you're from Vancouver and you've never

So I asked Sheridan if he would take me for a ride, Instead he offered me a ride as passenger in the race. The race began at noon Thursday with Sheridan's team and three others entered, Originally it was scheduled for Monday, but that day the wind chill factor had brought the temperature down to 30 below-much down to 80 below--much too cold for dog, let alone men.

On Thursday it was about 10 below and snowing light-

I had put on virtually all the clothes I owned, and even borrowed a scarf to

Before the race began bo-th the musher and passenger had to be tucked inside of their own sleeping bags. Then the whistle blew and we scrambled out. Sheridan immediately be-

we scrambled out.
Sheridan immediately began hitching up his six-dog team, the leaders, Noolty and Jock, and Silver Flopsie, Barney and Queen. I rolled up one bedroll, climbed into the sled, pulled the scarf over my face, and tossed the other bedroll over me.
Despite the other mushers having to hook up only five dogs each, we were first off. I had rather expected river ice to be nice and smooth. Instead it was very, very bumpy--and it was cold. At one point, I felt as though my eyelids were frozen off as the wind and snow blew directly at our faces, I pulled the sleeping bag right over my head and kept it that way until we rounded the corner at the half-way point of the three-mile race. point of the three-mile race.

"We're going home now,' Sheridan told the dogs, and they took off as though they understood exactly what he understood exactly what he said.

In fact, throughout the whole race, Sheridan didn't yell at the dogs, He just talked to them, and it obviously worked.

"I think we have a commanding lead, "Sheridan said to me, as we passed the other teams still on the first section of the race, It was rather an understatement, understatement.

We had done the race in about seven minutes, Second was Bill Hodgson, third was Gerry Couture, fourth was Ingo Grundmann-all are from Whitehorse, After the race, Sheridan told me a couple of the secrets of his success, One was that his lead dogs had eaten T-bone steaks the night before,

And probably the most im-

And probably the most important thing is how he handles his dogs. A lot of mushers have driven their dogs by fear, and beaten them when they didn't obey, he s aid.

Not Sheridan: "I would just as soon have the animal run for the love of running - and they do love running - as get that extra ounce out of them by beating them," he said.

Sheridan said he got interested in dogs after coming to Whitehorse from Montreal in 1966.

CURLING FIRST FOR OBSERVERS

The Whitehorse Curling Club had one of its more Club had one of its more unusual momings yesterday. On sheet number one, the two Russian observers to the Games, Semon Alexsaev and Dimitri Danilon picked up rock and broom and curled for the first time in their lives. There is no curling in Russia

HURT

Alaska badminton player Alaska badminton player Sharon Benerth was rushed to hospital Thursday when she fell while playing at badminton match at White-horse Recreational Centre.

It was first feared she had suffered a broken ankle but hospital officials said it was just a bad sprain. She'll be on crutches for two to three days.

NICOLE aux JEUX

LIMITED SPACE cut short yesterday's interview with Lou Lefaive, Director of Sport Canada. With your permission, we carry on:

we carry on:

LOU: I think amateur sport when referring to the Athlete's status has become over-glamorized. It has reached a point where amateurism, imposes upon athletes such rigid conditions and which are no longer in keeping with our time, finally only a few could truly qualify as amateur athletes. We would probably better off by thinking in terms of professional and commercial sport, Professionalism, being the status of athletes who, in order to pursue their competitive career, must rely on the government's or even private industy assistance. On the other hand, we could define commercial sport with regards to athletes who, in order to purmercial sport with regards to athletes who, in order to pur-mercial sport with regards to athletes who, are paid to compete, This is done in a number of ways: either under the patronage of large business organizations; under contract or if not as a shareholder in the company, on a commission basis, All being equally, binding agreements.

NICOLE: This is pretty grim, Let's come back to Arctic Games for a more cheerful note, LOU: You're absolutely right, sport shouldn't be allowed to have such dark overtones. The truth of the matter is we are living altogether a very exciting week, We're living the 1972 Arctic Winter Games and they are a remarkable success! Well organized, (this we owe to the Games Society), the food is good, the competition is more than honest, the athletes are having fun, and . . . that's what it's all about!

RAPPELLE AUX LECTEURS de langue française que non! Le simple fait d'adopter, mine de rien, la langue de l'immortel Shakespeare, n'est pas "ipso facto", indice de trahison. Il arrive parfois que certains propos et commentaires méritent d'être universellement compris et la fin, persiste à croire résolument la Machiavelique Nicole-à-la-pige, justifiera, de toute étemité, les moyens pour l'atteindre. Sic.

HIGH MOUNTAIN, to most of us, is nothing but the non-descript sepia and white mass as shown on world maps. High mountain is generally associated with sterility, of no use: nothing grows at high altitudes, nothing can be sold and higher still, nothing even survives. Unlike explorers of the seas, deserts, vast plateaus, rivers, and peles whose discoveries proved to be of invaluable wealth to trade, those who conquer the highest peaks will never be entitled to such rewards. But the greamess they achieve by taming the elements commands respect from all of us. Dogs commands

PARADOXICALLY, mountain-climbers have a flair for bringing everything down to earth; Ask any one of them why they attempt to conquer the highest peak and you will be answered: "because it's there!"

NOW HERE IS THIS TEAM of five, From Alaska; Scott Foster, radio sports commentator; Yukon: Martyn Williams, school teacher, Jim Boyde, Northwest Territories, student at Vancouver's Simon Fraser University, cross-country instructor; from Quebec; Louis Lambert, Provincial Government engineer and fifth; Monty Alfor, surveyor from Whitehorse and head of the mountain-climbing expedition. All these men are strong-minded individuals, They had never met before, None was ever consulted as to who should be one of the team.

They were brought together one day and that was it for ould be one of the team.

They were brought together one day and that was it: for the following seven or eight days they would be living, like it or not, very closely, together, and 24 hours a day, Mountain-climbing one would think, attracts the individualist, self-sufficient, independent type as opposed to other sports. Should this be true, how on earth (or up there) can five such men get along without stepping on each others frozen toes?

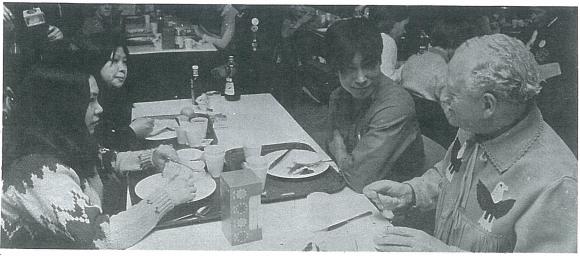

. LOUIS LAMBERT like all his teammates, in fact, never gave the problem a thought. The question was deliberately intended for Louis: as genuine a Quebecker as one can be, not terribly at ease with the language of his teammates, and with obvious signs of the quick gallic temper, in brief, had there been any conflict during this venture, Louis stood fair chances of being involved.

"WE HAD A COMMON GOAL" said Louis. "The summit! We shared the same awareness; a single awkward move or uncalculated step and we had it. This was irreversible and oh! bygosh did we know it! And you see with that sort of fixed idea behind your mind you sort of forget about trying to pick a fight with the guys.

The strange thing about it, is that you get caught in this process and once you reach the top you wake up with the greatest friends of your life. And you know it's real.

WHAT ABOUT LOUISE? How did Lambert's wife, this quiet little girl who waited throughout the whole expedition for the return of her husband. Quietly killing time doodling in her sketch pad behind the door of the hotel room in Whitehorse? Poking at her nose, a bit taken aback by such a question: "Louis always comes back."

ALLONS, ALLONS, Lise, Nôêl et Lucie demain les deux colonnes vous seront toute entière consacrées.

Returning to his table, His Excellency noted that something was amiss. Nam-ely, his breakfast. Only table top showed where just moments before bacon and eggs sat steaming. Who did this dastardly deed? Snidely Whiplash? A

"In the dining hall itself," says Ramsden," the young people from Yukon Hall have put in a terrific effort. They have been keeping the floors, counters and tables spotless. Unfortunately, the Governor-General was a victim of their efficiency."

Yukon Hall is a residence

Yukon Hall is a residence for native youths who come to school in Whitehorse from remote areas of the Yukon. It might be expected that athletes from many different areas across the North would have some problem adjusting to unfamiliar forms of food and preparation.

Watching the participants devour the Goudert Cuisine devour the Goudert Cuisine dispells that thought--immediately.
